Enterovirus outbreak confirmed here

Heritage Hall quarantined after 10 patients test positive

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A virus similar to the one that has hospitalized hundreds of children in several Midwestern states is now in Lawrenceburg, health officials confirmed Monday morning.

Instead of children, the virus has sickened the elderly, leaving two on ventilators, causing one to "code" while being transported to an area hospital and causing symptoms in several workers at a local senior care facility.

Wright

Anderson County Public Health Director Tim Wright confirmed Monday that 27 patients at Heritage Hall on North Main Street have exhibited symptoms associated with what's known as enterovirus, forcing at least five to be transported to area hospitals.

Ten of those 27 patients have since been confirmed to have the virus, for which there is no vaccine and no

How to avoid getting it

While there is no vaccine or specific treatment, people can avoid the virus by doing the following:

Wash hands often with soap and water for 20 seconds, especially after changing diapers.

Avoid touching eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands.

Avoid kissing, hugging, and sharing cups or eating utensils with people who are sick. Disinfect frequently touched surfaces, such as toys and doorknobs, especially if someone is sick.

What to do if you do

There is no specific treatment for people with respiratory illness caused by EV-D68, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

For mild respiratory illness, you can help relieve symptoms by taking over-the-counter medications for pain and fever. Aspirin should not be given to children.

Some people with severe respiratory illness may need to be hospitalized .

There are no antiviral medications currently available for people who become infected with EV-D68.

Woman guilty of ripping off elderly man

Newberry-Rice said to have spent money on breast augmentation, items at BJ's

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A Lawrenceburg woman is facing eight years in prison after pleading guilty to bilking an elderly man out of thousands of dollars, including money the victim's family says she used to have her breasts augmented, court documents show.

Newberry-Rice

Bridget Newberry-Rice, 33, of 1107 Crask Road pleaded guilty on charges of exploitation and fraudulent use of a credit card in a case dating back to 2010 when she took advantage of her husband's 81-year-old grandfather.

Her plea deal includes a recommended sentence of eight years by the commonwealth attorney's office.

Along with her breast augmentation, Newberry-Rice apparently used the elderly man's bank accounts and credit cards to purchase a variety of items for herself, including liquor, dining out and at BJ's, an adult novelty store in Lawrenceburg, according to statements made by the victim's daughter in court documents related to the case.

Newberry-Rice denied those accusations in other court documents, claiming she would never steal money from "pawpaw."

Newberry-Rice was originally indicted on charges that she unlawfully used $16,000 from the elderly victim's checking account and rang up $22,000 in credit card charges.

TEAMS PREPARE FOR BURGOO COOKOFF

Can anyone beat Four Roses?

Champs to face stiff competition, including Democrat party ringer

From staff reports

Will three-time champion Four Roses once again defend its title, or will one of the other teams — including one with a potential ringer — wrestle away the crown for having Anderson County's best burgoo?

That burning question will be answered Saturday, Sept. 28 when the fourth-annual Burgoo Cookoff takes place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the Lawrenceburg Green.

The annual event, sponsored by The Anderson News, has raised thousands of dollars for Sheriff Troy Young's Shop With a Cop program, which provides Christmas gifts for children in need.

Six teams have confirmed they will participate again this year. Along with defending champion Four Roses, teams will include Wild Turkey, Atmos Energy, Farmers Bank, Dudley Darnell and the Anderson County Democrat Party Executive Committee.

The event features each team making its own unique version of burgoo

You be the judge

The fourth annual Burgoo Cookoff is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 28 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Lawrenceburg Green.

It is sponsored by The Anderson News.

A fundraiser for Sheriff Troy Young's Shop With a Cop program, this year's annual event will feature six teams.

All are welcome to judge each team's burgoo and booth display. For a $2 donation, judges get to sample each team's burgoo and fill out a scorecard to determine the eventual winner.

Every dime raised benefits Shop With a Cop.

and has become one of the marquee events during the annual Burgoo Festival, scheduled this year from Sept. 27-29 in downtown Lawrenceburg.

Each team is judged by anyone willing to donate $2 to Shop With a Cop. In return, they are given a cup, spoon and scorecard on which they are asked to rank each team's burgoo on a scale of 1 to 10, along with each team's booth on the same scale. The team that amasses the most total points is declared the winner and receives a trophy donated by David Brown, owner of Lawrenceburg-based Events Imaging and Awards.

All proceeds go directly to Shop With a Cop, but that doesn't mean the teams aren't highly competitive.

Four Roses, lead by burgoo maven Jess Sanford, not only presents a tremendously popular burgoo, but also sets up a display that last year featured a customized, copper-lined Four Roses bourbon barrel from which it is served, along with a number of down-home items that have been popular with the thousands of judges who have participated.

Not to be outdone, participants from Wild Turkey set up an old west-styled bar, complete with swinging bar doors emblazoned with Wild Turkey's famous logo and a giant inflatable bottle of the world-famous bourbon.

Atmos Energy last year assembled an old-time shack and its participants were resplendent in their Duck Dynasty costumes.

Farmers Bank last year had a cowgirl theme, and Dudley Darnell, who cooked on location, had an old-time booth set up that reflected Kentucky tradition.

None of the teams have tipped their hands on booth design this year, including the local Democrats who have the person some say could be just the right ringer to dethrone Four Roses.

Reports are that Janette Barnett, known countywide for the culinary expertise, has volunteered to do the cooking, and is sure to give Four Roses a run for its money.

"We are absolutely thrilled to have so many great teams compete again this year," said Publisher Ben Carlson. "It's fun and competitive but the bottom line is that it helps purchase Christmas gifts for children who otherwise might not receive them.

"We are proud to help Sheriff Young in that quest and encourage everyone to come out and be a judge."

We can help.

Along with blanket coverage in the newspaper of all candidates heading into November's races, The Anderson News will give voters a chance to hear and see candidates answer questions and ask for your vote during a candidate forum scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 23 at Anderson County Middle School.

The event is scheduled from 6 to 9 p.m.

Candidates in races for judge-executive, mayor, family court judge, state representative and county clerk have either been or in the process of being invited.

The format for each will include opening statements from each participating candidate followed by a series of questions from Publisher Ben Carlson, who will moderate the event.

Candidates will then be given a chance to issue a closing statement.

Candidates for each position will be asked identical questions that will be a combination of those submitted by readers and from the paper's newsroom.

fall into the toilet, court records show.

Mitchell was arraigned Sept. 11 on the charge in Anderson County District Court on a $2,500 bond.

Mitchell was already out of jail on a $5,000 bond after being indicted Aug. 8 by the Anderson County Grand Jury on charges that include heroin trafficking and marijuana possession.

That indictment stemmed from an incident in June when police arrested her after surveillance footage showed her allegedly carrying stolen items into a room at a local hotel. During a search of the hotel room, police say they found heroin in Mitchell's purse.

As a condition of bond on that charge, a judge issued a stern warning while ordering her to submit to monthly drug screenings that included "zero tolerance for missed, positive or diluted tests."

Mitchell is scheduled to appear 9 a.m. Oct. 7 in Anderson County Circuit Court.

allegedly firing 60 to 80 rounds at police before allegedly fleeing and ramming his vehicle into a parked police vehicle.

According to a court document filed Sept. 12 by his attorneys, the "mental disease or defect" evidence will have a bearing on the "issue of guilt or punishment."

Nutgrass allegedly fired a barrage of ammunition at a state trooper and deputy who were arrived at his Mays Road residence after he called 911 and said his "family was closing in on him."

According to court files, Nutgrass was in a dispute with his sister, who he said was going to alert authorities to her concerns about his conceal carry permit, court records indicate.

When police arrived, they claim he was pacing on his front porch and demanding to see a specific officer who was not on duty at the time. Nutgrass then allegedly pointed a handgun at trooper Matt Rogers and deputy Loren Wells, who moved to a safer distance.

During questioning, police say Nutgrass told police he had "some stuff that would go right through their bullet-proof vests or at least hurt like a [SOB]."

Nutgrass allegedly opened fire with a variety of firearms, forcing officers to return fire.

No one was injured during the exchange.

Nutgrass then fled in his vehicle and rammed into a police car blocking the road. Police say they uncovered an AK-47 rifle and loaded revolver in his vehicle.

During questioning, police say Nutgrass told them he had "some stuff that would go right through their bullet-proof vests or at least hurt like a [SOB]."

When asked where he was going when he tried to escape, Nutgrass is quoted in court documents as saying that he was "going to where his hand grenades and rocket launcher were hidden."

specific treatment, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control's website.

Wright said "several" workers in the facility have also developed symptoms of the virus.

Wright emphasized that no cases of the virus have been confirmed outside of the nursing facility, including at any the county's schools.

The rash of cases apparently began locally last Tuesday. By Thursday, Wright and John Shuttleworth, deputy director of the Anderson County Department of Public Safety, were notified and arranged to have the patients tested for the virus.

The following day, officials in the facility declared a quarantine, cancelling activities, restricting new admissions and requiring visiting family members to wear masks.

Wright said no new cases were detected over the weekend, which allowed the facility to lift its self-imposed quarantine.

Wright said it remains unclear if the virus is enterovirus D68, which was first detected in the 1960s but rarely occurred until earlier this summer, when hundreds of cases were confirmed in Midwestern cities. As many as 500 children were reportedly hospitalized in one weekend in Cincinnati two weeks ago, and several hundred were hospitalized around the same time in St. Louis.

Wright said the Kentucky Department of Laboratory Services confirmed the enterovirus on Friday, and sent those samples to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta to determine the actual version of the virus.

"We don't know if it's D68 for sure; that's why we sent it," Wright said.

Wright said when his office was contacted by Heritage Hall, he said all 10 patients who were "swabbed" tested negative for flu types A and B.

He said they were then tested for the entrovirus, and seven of those 10 came back positive.

Wright said he is unaware of similar cases in neighboring counties, adding that the staff at Heritage Hall went "above and beyond" in dealing with the outbreak.

"They handled it great; they couldn't have done any better," Wright said. "I wouldn't change a thing about the way they handled it."

Enterovirus D68 (EV-D68) was first identified in California in 1962, but has not been commonly reported in the United States, according to the CDC.

It can cause mild to severe respiratory illness, with symptoms including fever, runny nose, sneezing, cough, and body and muscle aches.

Children infected in Missouri and Illinois typically had difficulty breathing. Many had asthma or a history of wheezing, the CDC reports.

The virus spreads from person to person when an infected person coughs, sneezes or touches contaminated surfaces, much like the common cold.

Through Sept. 15, 104 people in 10 states were determined to have contracted EV-D68, according to the CDC.

Gaines a one-man remembrance of Sept. 11, 2001

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Alonzo Gaines wanted to make sure that people in Anderson County remembered the horror of Sept. 11, 2001, when terrorists attacked the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

Gaines spent a rainy Thursday morning (Sept. 11) walking around downtown Lawrenceburg planting American flags in flowerpots on Main Street and locations on Court Street.

He said he was surprised that some people wondered why he was doing it.

"A few people asked me why I'm doing it," said Gaines, who is no stranger to making his feelings known by carrying signs to make his feelings about certain issues known.

"I told them it's about 9/11 ... you don't remember that we were attacked?

"People from all over the world came to America to be free; terrorists came here to kill us."

Gaines added that he took care to ensure that the flags he planted weren't made somewhere else.

"These flags were made in America," he said. "They weren't made in Iraq or somewhere like that."

Women beaters waging the real war on women

He held her down near the wood stove and put a gun in her mouth.

That happened to someone I love very dearly a couple of decades ago, along with other instances of physical abuse that I didn't know about at the time and only was made aware many years after the coward who committed those crimes wised up and moved away.

The incident involving a pro football player coldcocking his wife in an elevator brought domestic violence to the top of the nation's conversation during the past week, and brought back to me how angry I remain at what that coward did to someone I love.

Ben Carlson
General manager

Coming to grips with that anger has been difficult for many reasons. First and foremost is that the coward never had to answer for his actions, including by my own hand. For years I've been torn between being thankful I didn't know and outraged that I didn't, denying me a chance to set things right.

Had I known, 30-year-old Ben Carlson almost certainly wouldn't have been able to contain his outrage and would have undoubtedly ended up serving time for felonious assault or best, had the coward lived through the beating I'd have given him. I'm hopeful but far from convinced that 50-year-old Ben Carlson would show restraint, either, because in all the years since I have not seen nor heard from that man.

Still, the gratification of tooling up on that son-of-a-you-know-what would have been particularly sweet.

It's time to talk about the real war on women, folks, which is being fought every day in the homes of abused women who don't give a damn about which company provides their choice of birth control as part of a health insurance plan.

Of course the law was never involved. Beaten women are also scared women who fear for the lives and children while tolerating the intolerable, no matter how little sense makes to those not in their shoes.

Like most of you, I view men who hit women as among the lowest forms of humanity, right up there with those who molest children. I hate hearing about it, hate writing about and hate printing articles and court dockets that are sadly replete with examples of men right here in Anderson County who apparently have no compunctions whatever in laying their hands on their wives and girlfriends. Just take a peak at last week's front page to read the latest example, this one by a local attorney who allegedly hit his wife in the face with a can of Red Bull.

Don't doubt me on this. Whether you know it or want to admit it, everyone reading this column comes in contact with men right here who, when no one is looking, administer hidden bruises on arms, backs and legs (blackened eyes are too suspicious), or crack their woman in the ear in what for years has been a commonly accepted practice called "home correction."

Oh, some of them end up punished for their crimes, but the vast majority are allowed tocarry on as though nothing has happened, thanks to cowed wives too afraid to call the police.

Can you blame them? Even if the man involved is charged and jailed, getting set free takes nothing more than a few bucks and a promise to obey a restraining order that's worth less than the paper on which it's written. In the meantime, the snail-paced legal system allows them to drag out their court cases for months and sometimes years on end, leaving the battered woman to fret him stopping by to exact a measure of revenge while prosecutors barter with overwhelmed public defenders to cut a deal that hardly ever results in serious jail time.

I've sat amazed while watching coverage of the football player whose case epitomizes of the lousy legal system that allowed him to serve a diverted sentence provided he seeks counseling.

I've been even more amazed with the National Organization of Women, which is calling for the football commissioner to resign but, as of this writing, has not done the same for the New Jersey prosecutor who did see that video and signed off on the diversion program. At least the commissioner originally suspended the player for two games, a far more expensive and punitive measure that the one meted out by the courts.

It's time to talk about the real war on women, folks, which is being fought every day in the homes of abused women who don't give a damn about which company provides their choice of birth control as part of a health insurance plan.

It's also time for those who can make a real difference — that would be our lawmakers — to rewrite ordinances and laws that give prosecutors, judges and juries more strident penalties to keep abusers behind bars where they belong. You know, like the penalties associated with DUI.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Coach's response 'disappointing'

To the editor:

My daughter has been playing softball since she was 4 years old in the county recreation league. She has been a good ballplayer and had several coaches. For the past year, she has played on a travel team, but since she turned 9, had to move off the travel team and back into the county recreation league.

She has had the will and desire to play softball on her own accord. No push from her parents at all. Just a good kid that has the heart, drive, and desire to want to play on her own. We ask her each season if she wants to play again and without hesitation her answer is always yes.

My wife and I have not provided our six kids with the latest and greatest sports equipment. She has used an inexpensive metal Walmart bat since she started playing ball. So have our other children.

Toward the end of her travel team games this summer, one of her coaches suggested we let her play with a lighter bat because her swing almost always drove the ball to first base. While she is one of the faster runners, it's still hard to out run a ball hit to first base. She gave it her best shot though.

Prior to purchasing a new softball bat, last week we decided to let her practice with her brother's bat, which was a little shorter and lighter. Not the best bat for her, but it did the trick in making her swing just fast enough to redirect the ball to another part of the field. She seemed to

Biennial Beef Bash set for Sept. 25

The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, Food and Environment and the Kentucky Cattlemen's Association will host the fourth biennial Beef Bash, a unique field day for Kentucky beef cattle producers, on Sept. 25 at the UK Research and Education Center in Princeton.

Tommy Yankey
Columnist

"Research and outreach efforts such as Beef Bash are an important means of providing up-to-date information to cattle producers. "We also are keenly aware of the importance of the social and business aspects of cattle production."

Demonstrations and educational exhibits will focus on beef markets, minerals, hay storage, feedlot performance, genetics, pasture management, grazing and free Beef Quality Assurance training and certification. Beef Quality Assurance is a national program that provides guidelines for beef cattle production.

The program raises consumer confidence through offering proper management techniques and a commitment to quality within every segment of the beef industry.

"This field day is a good opportunity to learn more about the current issues we are facing in the beef industry and to talk with fellow cattlemen about the beef industry.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. CDT, and programs and tours start at 9 a.m. A meal will be available for purchase. No preregistration is required. The noon program features Nancy Cox, Dean of the College of Agriculture, Food and Environment, and John Paterson, executive director of producer education for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

The UK Research and Education Center is on Kentucky 91 South, 1.5 miles southeast of the Caldwell County Courthouse in Princeton.

Time to ensure your vaccines are up to date

Interesting health and illness statistics arrive weekly in my email. The Centers for Disease Control issues a weekly report on notifiable diseases and mortality tables. One of the reports is "provisional cases of infrequently reported notifiable diseases" (less than 1,000 cases reported during the preceding year.) A few of these are diseases that were once eliminated in the United States.

Joan Martin
Columnist

Work is progressing worldwide to eliminate diseases such as polio and measles but total eradication hasn't happened yet.

Measles is a highly contagious, acute viral illness that can lead to serious complications and death. Measles elimination was declared in the United States in 2000. However, importations of measles cases from other areas of the world continue to occur. Outbreaks in the United States occur primarily among unvaccinated people.

There have been 582 confirmed measles cases since Jan. 1. This is the highest reported yearly total of measles cases since elimination. The message seems clear to vaccinate children.

Confirmed cases of pertussis (commonly called whooping cough) are also on the rise. Kentucky had 114 confirmed cases of pertusis through May 24. Adults should consider getting a booster once for Tdap. Maintain protection with Td on the schedule recommended by your health care provider.

It's worth noting that some diseases have not been reported since Jan. 1, 2009. The tables only include the most recent five years. It's probable that some of these diseases haven't been reported for many years. The United States has not had a confirmed case of the following diseases in the last five years: western equine encephalitis virus disease, diphtheria, poliomyelitis (paralytic), polio virus infection (nonparalytic), SARS, smallpox, viral hemorrhagic fever and yellow fever.

Adults and children should review their immunization status during the next physical. Schedule an annual physical exam soon if it's been more than 12 months since your last wellness check. All health insurance policies now provide a free annual physical exam for all policyholders.

Homeownership brings visions of the movie 'The Money Pit'

Recently, my husband and I purchased a house in Frankfort. It's a cute little house that was built in the '70s with room for our family to eventually grow, but lately small household repairs and moving has me feeling like a character in the movie "The Money Pit."

Shelley Spillman
News Editor

That used to be one of my favorite movies. I used to laugh at all the things that went wrong in their house like when the staircase went out and Tom Hanks and Shelley Long had to lug pails of hot water up a ladder to bathe. Who could forget when Tom Hanks was literally stuck in the floor for hours on end? Though as a homeowner now, I find myself relating so much to this movie.

We found a swarm of wasps had invaded out storage shed and repeatedly stung my husband. We had to get the building sprayed for bees and wasps. There is no co-ax cable in any room of the house other than a random guest bedroom, making it impossible at the moment to watch TV in our living room or have internet without weekend long work to run the cable. There was a $3,000 repair to fix the drainage problem underneath the house, but luckily we negotiated that at closing. The outlet to plug the dryer into the wall didn't match our dryer plug, and my husband had to fix that also. Our Knockout Rose bushes are dying. I walk around the yard snapping photos and searching 'Rose bush diseases' hoping to find the answer.

It seems everything ends up being a larger fix, including a simple wobbly toilet that was hours of work. It's probably because we are so inexperienced and figuring out how to fix household items through YouTube videos.

What topped the cake was this weekend when were mov-

Shorter days mean winter is on its way

The slow roll into winter has begun. The sun is rising after 7 a.m. and dropping before 8 p.m., and we have already started to adapt our lives. How many times were you just coming inside to eat dinner at 9 p.m. this summer? Surely I'm not the only one.

We adapt our lives to fit each season. Besides cleaning out our closets to make room for the bulky clothes of winter, we're probably cleaning out our sheds to make room for tool storage and lawn chairs.

We are entering what I call the 'tween time. We are in-between seasons. We're still harvesting tomatoes and ing the last few things from the condo to the house. I was rear-ended by someone behind me who was going around 45 mph.

I was very sore and decided to get checked out at the hospital. The EMTs loaded me up on stiff board and neck brace so all I could see was the sky. Once in the ambulance, an EMT asked me the standard questions of name, birth date, etc. When he asked me my address I couldn't help but laugh. It struck me as funny that the move had brought on so much stress. It seemed like whatever could go wrong, did go wrong.

Sometimes you just have to laugh when things aren't going your way. I'm a firm believer in maintaining a good sense of humor, and after this weekend, I am also a firm believer in hiring a moving company.

I always wondered how my father knew how to fix just about anything as a kid, especially before Google. Now I understand that he just got under the hood of the car with a few tools and a resolve to figure it out even if it took all night. There is no knowledge without mileage.

Cost Share applications due Sept. 30

From staff reports

The Anderson County Conservation District is still accepting applications for the Kentucky Soil Erosion and Water Quality Cost Share Program, according to a news release.

Roy Toney, district chairman, reminds those who are interested in applying that the cutoff date for this year's ranking is Sept. 30. Although applications are accepted any time of the year, those received after the deadline will not be funded until next year.

Funds are for new practices only and cannot be applied to practices that have already been started or completed. Approved applicants will have one year to complete practices.

Some conservation practices eligible for cost share include:

Fence: permanent fence is available to exclude livestock from creeks, ponds, woods, etc. Also permanent or temporary cross fencing is available to facilitate rotational grazing.

Stream crossing: available where livestock need a crossing point on a stream and/or to provide livestock water. The stream must be fenced or planned to be so.

Streambank stabilization: fencing is required where cattle are present. A filter strip or riparian buffer is required with this practice.

maybe even a few beans and squash right now, but basically we are putting the garden to bed.

I'm still canning tomatoes, but after that I'll be picking green tomatoes to wrap in newspaper and store in a box in the house. Keep that box in a cool room and you can still be eating ripe tomatoes as late as November.

The sunflowers are ready to harvest now. Those nodding, yellowing heads tell you it's time to cut and hang. Leave a foot of stem to making hanging and drying easier. Let them hang in a dark, cool room for about two weeks to cure.

My sweet potatoes are probably ready to harvest, but the plants haven't started to yellow and die back yet. I am going to take cuttings to serve as houseplants this winter. Not only do I get lots of green inside to help purify the air, I'll have plenty of new plants to put in the ground next year.

When I do dig up my beautiful tubers, I'll knock off the dirt and lay them in the sun for several hours. Then, I'll bring them indoors and lay them out in a hot room for two weeks to finish curing. After that, they go into the cool dark of the pantry in an open box or crate.

Though the cool nip in the air has started to slow plant growth down, it seems to have the opposite effect on my dogs. As I type this they are running circles around the kitchen, anxious to get me outside on the farm. It's 58 degrees and still dark out, but they are wound up tighter than a popcorn fart.

They love this weather. Maybe it's because they think I have more time to play now. I don't, but they think I should. They love to take me on walks this time of year. I love it as well, but they pick up lot of hitchhikers along the way. Their coats gather seeds like my fleece pajamas gather dog hairs. All I can say is, let the nonstop grooming begin.

Now, get out there and finish those chores. Gather all downed fruit and finish that pruning. Get your equipment repaired and winterized and finish stocking the pantry for winter. The calendar says fall begins this Monday. Oh boy. I better dig out my long underwear. Happy growing.

do pretty good with it and liked using it, so at her recreation league game on Sept. 9, we let her use it. If it worked well for her, it would help us make a decision on which new type of bat to purchase.

As she came out of the dugout to bat next, at the bottom of the lineup in the first inning, I noticed she had a different bat. I called out to her to get "her" bat. She went back to get it but seemed confused. We ending up getting a third out prior to her bat so the inning ended.

I took that opportunity to go the dugout and ask the coach why she was not using her bat. His response to me was direct and stern. "I am the coach, and I will tell her what bat to use. If she doesn't use the bat I tell her to, she will sit out the rest of the game."

Needless to say that took me by surprise. I told him I wanted her to use her own bat since she had been practicing with it, and if he would let her practice with his bat at next practice, I would be happy to let her use his bat next game if it worked better for her. He then said he wanted me to go with him to talk to the park recreation manager. I did not go with him because I saw no need for this situation to be elevated to this extreme level, just because I asked for my child to be able to use her bat in a recreation league 10U ball game.

The coach of the team came back to the bleachers where we were sitting a few minutes later, and told me that my daughter was "off the team." By this point she was going up to bat, I told my wife to go get her and the rest of our kids and go to our van in the parking lot. I then went and spoke with park recreation league manager who walked down to the parking lot with me. We discussed the situation and he stated that in the recreation league, no child should be mandated by a coach to use a specific piece of equipment or face being removed from the team. I agree.

My daughter has a lot of drive, heart, listens well, and is teachable. Aren't those the foundational attributes you want in a young player? The physical skills are then taught or improved upon by the coaching team - proper footwork, throwing skills, good pitching technique, etc. Have times changed so much that we are now just focused on equipment and winning the game at all cost, up to and including kicking a child off the team for using her own bat? If this is what sports has come to, it is a shame.

To my daughter, you will be confronted with a lot of obstacles and challenges in your life. All I can tell you is trust in God to set your path, keep your head up, do what you know in your heart is right, dust off your pants when you get knocked down, and keep trying.

Never give up. In the grand scheme of things, if getting kicked off the team for nothing other than using your own bat is one of the worst things that ever happens to you, you'll be ok. You are going to grow up and be a great contributor to our community and our country, regardless of where you end up on the softball roster. We love you - Mom and Dad.

Submitted to make parents and coaches stop and remember what is important in sports, especially at the elementary level.

Theatre thanks community for support

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the community of Lawrenceburg and all of Anderson County for their overwhelming support of Anderson County Community Theatre's (ACCT) production of Steel Magnolias. Our production would not have been possible without the financial backing and support of the following [our] sponsors.

We owe a special gratitude to everyone at Anderson County High School for the use of their theatre facilities, in particular, Chris Glass (principal), Sue Lou Smith and Jaclyn Haddix (arts and humanities) and the entire custodial staff. Shelley Spillman of The Anderson News was instrumental in our success by providing front page coverage of the show for two consecutive weekends. Thanks to Alton Baptist Church for providing rehearsal space for months leading up to the performances.

Perhaps most importantly, thanks so much to the hundreds of patrons who came to support the arts in Anderson County by attending the show in record numbers. Through your support, social networking and word-of-mouth advertising, our audience attendance increased for six consecutive shows. You are the reason we do what we do.

In closing, I'd like to give a personal thanks to the three individuals in our ACCT family who are most responsible for bringing this show to life. Angi Robinson (vice president on the ACCT Board) strongly advocated bringing Steel Magnolias back to our stage, thus making this endeavor possible. Further, not only did Angi perform the role of Truvy, she was instrumental in our efforts to secure costumes, wigs, make-up, props and helped to build the set. Desireé White Douglas (ACCT Board) performed as Ouiser, and when a family emergency largely pulled me from my original function as producer, she stepped up and got the job done (handling all aspects of fundraising, publicity, ticket sales, advertising and much more). Finally, special thanks to Catherine Partlow. In addition to performing as Clairee, Catherine directed the play, designed the set, and helped with props, costumes, make-up and so on (all while serving as our new "president elect" on the ACCT Board). Catherine created a vision for this production, brought that vision to life, and saw it through to its completion. Thank you ladies.

Thanks again to our community for supporting the arts in Anderson County.

Wild Turkey Master Distiller Jimmy Russell, left, meets with US Sen. Mitch McConnell last Wednesday at McConnell's office in Washington, D.C. McConnell honored Russell for his 60th year of making Bourbon for Wild Turkey with a tribute published in the United States Congressional Record and recognized him as the longest tenured active spirits master distiller in the world.

Lawrenceburg's Russell honored by U.S. Senate

From staff reports

The honors just keep pouring in for what is perhaps Anderson County's most famous resident.

Wild Turkey Master Distiller Jimmy Russell, fresh off being honored earlier this month with a lifetime honorary membership with the Kentucky Distillers' Association's Board of Directors, Russell was whisked off to Washington, D.C. last week, where he was honored by U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, who praised Russell from the Senate floor.

"Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a friend and legendary Kentuckian, Wild Turkey Distillery's Master Distiller Jimmy Russell," said McConnell, whose remarks were entered into the official Congressional Record. (See full transcript below).

"This year marks the 60th year Jimmy has been making Bourbon for Wild Turkey, a fact that the distillery is rightfully proud to celebrate.

As a 60-year Bourbon veteran, Jimmy is the longest tenured active spirits master distiller in the world."

McConnell's tribute to Russell entered inot Congressional Record

From staff reports

Following are comments made by U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, which were entered into the Congressional Record.

Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a friend and legendary Kentuckian, Wild Turkey Distillery's Master Distiller Jimmy Russell.

This year marks the 60th year Jimmy has been making Bourbon for Wild Turkey, a fact that the distillery is rightfully proud to celebrate.

As a 60-year Bourbon veteran, Jimmy is the longest tenured active spirits master distiller in the world.

Kentucky is, of course, the birthplace of Bourbon. The drink itself is named for Bourbon County, KY, in the heart of the Bluegrass State, where the product first emerged.

Kentucky produces 95 percent of the world's Bourbon supply, and Kentucky's iconic Bourbon brands ship more than 30 million gallons of the spirit to 126 countries, making Bourbon the largest export category among all U.S. distilled spirits.

Not only is Kentucky the overwhelming producer of the world's Bourbon, Bourbon gives much back to Kentucky. It is a vital part of the state's tourism and economy.

Jimmy grew up only 5 miles away from the Wild Turkey Distillery, located in Lawrenceburg, KY. His passion for Bourbon led him to study under whiskey luminaries, including Bill Hughes, Wild Turkey's second master distiller; and Ernest W. Ripy, Jr., great-nephew of distillery founder James Ripy and Wild Turkey's third master distiller.

This sign at the Wild Turkey Distrillery commemorates the birth of Master Distiller Jimmy Russell, who grew up just five miles from the distillery that would make him a legend across the world.

Jimmy recalls being taken under Bill's wing and learning everything about the business from the ground up. Since becoming master distiller in the mid-1960s, he has traveled the world as an unofficial ambassador of Bourbon, introducing people from as far and wide as Japan and Australia to American's native spirit.

Over the past 60 years, Jimmy has been responsible for the launches of several new Wild Turkey brands and expressions, such as Tradition, Tribute, 17-year-old Wild Turkey for Japan, Rare Breed, American Spirit, Kentucky Spirit and Russell's Reserve, which he cocreated with his son and distilling partner Eddie Russell.

Jimmy broke new ground in 1976 with the first honeyed Bourbon, at the time called Wild Turkey Liqueur. The evolution of that product today is known as American Honey.

Jimmy is also responsible for overseeing the production of Wild Turkey 101, the distillery's flagship brand.

This fall, Wild Turkey released a commemorative Diamond Anniversary limited-edition Bourbon created by Jimmy's son, distilling partner and Bourbon Hall of Famer Eddie Russell.

As for Jimmy himself, he is known to enjoy his Bourbon neat or with a touch of branch water.

As a legend in the distilled spirits industry,

Jimmy is a member of the Kentucky Bourbon Hall of Fame. He is a member of the Whiskey Hall of Fame and a whiskey judge for the International Wine and Spirits Competition.

Lawrenceburg's Jimmy Russell displays a Diamond Anniversary bottle of Wild Turkey, marking his 60th year with the famous bourbon distiller.

He has been honored by the Commonwealth of Kentucky General Assembly, been anointed a Kentucky Colonel, and received the key to the city from the mayor of Lawrenceburg.

When not hard at work at Wild Turkey, Jimmy spends time with his wife Joretta. They have three children, Eddie, Mike, and Kathy, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

An avid sports fan, Jimmy is a lifelong supporter of local Anderson County High School athletic programs for girls and boys.

I want to congratulate Jimmy Russell for reaching his 60th anniversary of work at Wild Turkey Distillery. His lifetime of achievement in the distilled spirits industry is certainly something to be proud of. I know my Senate colleagues join me in commending Jimmy for decades of success.

The dollars raised or spent on veterans and military families were $20,772,340, and the number of military families served was 3,546,528. These numbers would have nearly doubled if all units had reported. These numbers were reflective of only 58 percent of units reporting.

Poker Run raises needed funds for Healing Field

Photos furnished

Riders take off during the seventh annual Healing Field Poker Run. There were 84 registered to ride in this year's poker run, which is the primary fundraiser for the Healing Field.

From staff reports

The American Legion Auxiliary Anderson Unit 34 held the seventh annual Poker Run on Aug. 40 to benefit the American Legion Auxiliary Department of Kentucky Healing Field.

Signaling the start of the Poker Run was Department of Kentucky Auxiliary President Lana Goley. Accompanying Goley was her husband Marty Goley, who is the Department of Kentucky American Legion commander. Also to start the ride was Marine Lance Cpl. Robert Shawn Callahan, who was home on leave from Afghanistan. Callahan stood in the street in his dress blues and saluted each motorcyclist as they came out of the legion. Callahan will be going to California this month.

There were 84 registered to ride and each received a door prize upon returning to the legion. A delicious meal was served to all. A silent auction was held with many items including memorable bottles of bourbon with a picture of the healing field etched on the front and the American flag on the back. A 50/50 jackpot was held with the winner donating his winnings to the healing field. The first and second worst poker hand each received donated plaque.

The American Legion Auxiliary Anderson Unit 34 wishes to thank all citizens and businesses for their generous donations. There are so many who have given their time, talents and money. The legion auxiliary wishes to thank those who donated door prizes, the businesses and individuals who sponsored ads on the T-shirts, the donations of food and the volunteers who cook each year for the Poker Run. FUNERAL COACH BRINGS UP REAR AT SIDEWALK DAY PARADE

This old funeral coach marked the end of the Sidewalk Days parade back in Sept. 1964. The sidewalk days drew perhaps the largest crowd ever to throng the sidewalks of Lawrenceburg's downtown area. This old conveyance was probably used between 1900 and 1910 and was owned by A.A. Barnett of Campbellsburg. Pulling the coach was a team, owned and driven by Elmo Bruner and accompanied by Vernon Record. The entry sponsored by Gordon Funeral Home was being checked by Parade Marshall Johnny Brown. Bruner, a former magistrate, was the father of Lucille Duncan, who was Anderson County Circuit Court Clerk for several years and wife of Robert Duncan, and Arlene Gregory, wife of Carl Gregory. Record was affiliated with the Gordon Funeral Home for many years. At one time Gordon Funeral Home was located toward the center of town and then moved into the larger Dowling Hall.

Children deserve a chance to live and die as God intends

Brian Owens
Faith columnist

Texas state Sen. Wendy Davis made political and media waves last year after she carried out an 11-hour filibuster on the floor of the Texas State Senate in opposition to a pro-life bill that would ban abortions on unborn children after the 20th week of pregnancy. The bill would eventually pass and be signed into law, but the Democrat senator used it to raise her political capital as a nominee for race for governor of Texas.

Now Davis has released a book – her memoirs – in which describes her "rags-to-riches" story, as well as her own experience having two abortions, after which she emerged as a self-described "different person," and a vociferous champion of a woman's right to terminate her pregnancy.

In an interview with Kurtis Lee of the Los Angeles Times, Davis recounted her experience when a baby girl she was carrying was diagnosed with what she calls a "severe brain abnormality" that would have eventually led to her death. This diagnosis caused her and her then-husband to opt to have the unborn child aborted, citing her belief that the baby "was already suffering" as reason enough to end the pregnancy. She then goes on to describe her experience of being in an "indescribable blackness ... [of] deep, dark despair and grief, a heavy wave that crushed [her]" from which she thought she would never recuperate.

I, in no way, want to make light of her experience. The cases are well documented of post-abortion depression that women experience. I can only imagine that her self-described hell was a real place of mental and emotional anguish. I am glad she came through it; so many women never find a way out.

But I wish the so-called "change" she says she experienced was her position on abortion. Many women who choose to abort their babies do so, not because they are pro-choice, as much as they think they have no choice. Many of these women are otherwise good mothers to children they already have. Others make the decision based on someone else's voice in their ear, whether that is a boyfriend, girlfriend or even a parent, who insist they do not need to be "tied-down" with a baby this early in life. Others, albeit a few, happily exercise their right simply because they can.

I do not know how Ms. Davis "changed" with respect to her view of abortion. She cites her reason for aborting her child as being her belief that the baby was already suffering; that the baby would eventually die from this condition and so there was no reason in giving any experience of life at all. Such rationale is deplorable. As I said, I am sure her experience was painful. I cannot imagine it being anything but so. But I do know that every child deserves a chance to be born, and to die, as naturally as God intended.

All too often, the suffering we dread is our own, in not having the life and opportunities we think we deserve; a life that cannot happen in caring for a special needs child. And yet, there is no greater opportunity – indeed, no greater blessing – than to care for the least of these, which in many cases the only return we get in the investment is simple obedience to the word of God and the promise that – even though it may not make sense now – in the end it will all work out for good (Romans 8:28).

Brian T. Owens is associate pastor with youth and children emphasis at Farmdale Baptist Church.

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS

I will obey the laws of our land until they violate God's law. Peter gave us an example of this in Acts 4:17-20 where he let the leaders know, that he WOULD NOT follow man's law when it contradicts what God's law states.

All of this political correctness that we see prevailing in many of the denominational world is destroying the faith that Jesus died for. A man recently left a major denomination because they were for everything, and against nothing. What would it take for you to leave where you attend?

Just because something has become "civil law" and accepted by most people, it does not make it right in the eyes of God. Just because gay marriages are becoming more and more "civilly" accepted, it doesn't mean that God has or will ever accept such (Matt. 19:5-6; Romans 1:24-32; 1 Cor. 6:9-10; Gal. 5:19-21). God's rule from the beginning has and will continue to be, one man and one woman for life, that's the proper condition for the family.

Politically correct folks want the freedom to say what they want and do what they believe, but would deny faithful Christians the same opportunity to speak the oracle of God (1 Peter 4:11), their belief. We must speak and do that which is correct and authorized by God, and nothing else.

HEALING FIELD 'VIVID REMINDER' OF WAR ON TERROR

Last week's full moon shines amid the flags at the American Legion's Healing Field, a tribute to Kentucky soldiers killed in the war on terror. Tyler Cox, a 1969 graduate of Anderson County High School who produced sports coverage of the school's football team for The Anderson News in 1968 and 1969, submitted the photo. Now a resident of Whitney, Texas, Cox said he was in town for the funeral of his nephew, Tracy Briscoe. Cox said he snapped the photo Sept. 10, a day before the anniversary of the 9/11 terror attacks. '[The Healing Field] display should remind all of the price paid in the war on terror,' Cox wrote in an email. 'Anderson County residents are fortunate to have such a vivid reminder available to them.'

Will Carlton poses while playing for Georgetown College from 1998-2000.

Thrills never stop for Will

Former Anderson star Carlton named to NAIA Hall of Fame

It has been nearly 15 years since Will Carlton put on his trunks and laced up the high-tops, but the basketball awards continue to come in for the former Anderson County High School star.

John Herndon
Sports Editor

Carlton learned last Thursday that he had been selected for the NAIA Hall of Fame for his exploits during three years at Georgetown College.

"I am very honored and humbled to be receiving this recognition," said Carlton, who graduated from Georgetown in 2000. "I'd like to thank Charlie Grote, a fellow NAIA Hall of Fame member, and Georgetown College coach Christ Briggs for nominating me and doing all the leg work that goes along with that."

Carlton will be inducted into the NAIA Hall of Fame on Tuesday, March 17, the day before the NAIA Tournament begins in Kansas City.

Carlton was an all-state first teamer at Anderson County in 1995 and played on the Kentucky All-Star team, which split the summer series with Indiana that year. He remains Anderson County's all-time leading rebounder.

Carlton signed with the University of Utah, where he played one season under Coach Rick Majerus. Carlton played on a Utah team that advanced to the NCAA round of 16 before being eliminated by the Kentucky Wildcats, who were on their way to a national championship.

Before that game, Majerus quipped that Carlton, a Wildcat fan growing up, would not know what to do if a fight broke out.

Carlton gave his all, but his home state beckoned and he transferred to Georgetown the following year. After sitting out a season, he led the Tigers to their first NAIA national title in 1998.

The team also won two Mid-South Conference regular season titles and two tournament titles during Carlton's career. Georgetown advanced to the NAIA national championship game in 2000, but was denied a second title.

During Carlton's three seasons at Georgetown, the Tigers compiled a 101-13 record.

Carlton finished his college career with 2,197 points at Georgetown, seventh in school history. He is fourth on the school's rebounding list with 1,170, third in blocked shots with 103 and 10th in steals with 158.

Carlton also holds the Georgetown school record with 51 points in a game.

While at Georgetown, Carlton was a three-time NAIA All-American and won the Chuck Taylor Award for the Most Valuable Player in the 1998 NAIA Tournament. He was also selected to the NAIA All-Tournament team in 2000 and was a two-time Mid-South Conference Player of the Year.

"This is an individual honor, but it is the culmination of sevearl positive influences in my life," Carlton said. "I have had roughly 20-25 coaches through the years and they all gave me something. I can remember Lynn

Turnovers doom Bearcat bid to become elite

Boyle pulls away late, hands Anderson second straight defeat

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

The degree of separation between the very good and the elite is rarely large. The margin for error among the very good who are chasing those elite is even smaller.

Anderson County, one of those in the realm of very good, found that out Friday when it was trying to take down Boyle County, a program that has been in the highest echelon of Kentucky high school football for the last 15 years.

The Bearcats turned the ball over five times, all via interceptions, as Boyle pulled away to a 48-26 win that was much closer than the score would indicate.

Boyle scored twice in a 30-second span late in the fourth quarter to break open what had been a battle between Anderson, a 2011 state finalist, and the Rebels, a seven-time state championship program.

Boyle has won all seven of its titles since 1999, the first five coming under current coach Chuck Smith, who returned to the school this year after serving on the football staff at the University of Kentucky for nearly 10 seasons.

"They are a great, great football team," said Anderson coach Mark Peach, who has often referenced Boyle as a blueprint for building a championship program. "I am just disappointed we didn't make a game of it in the second half."

But the Bearcats were unable to pull off the upset largely due to the turnovers. Boyle turned just two of the thefts into touchdowns but stopped what could have been key Anderson drives with two others.

"Certainly the turnovers were big," Peach said. "We have got to do a better job executing and a better job of coaching. We have to do a better job all around.

Records can be deceptive

Bearcats, Titans looking for wins after rugged early season slates

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

It would be easy to look at Mercer County's 1-3 record and conclude that Anderson County a shoo-in to get a win in high school football action Friday night.

Such thinking would be foolish. The Titans will present a major challenge to the Bearcats in a renewal of a rivalry that dates to 1963.

"Mercer, like us, has played a very tough non-district schedule," Anderson coach Mark Peach says. "They are a very good football team."

The record tells the story. While Mercer owns a victory over winless West Jessamine, it is those three losses that catch the eye.

The Titans opened with a 44-6 loss at Bowling Green. Yes, the same Bowling Green that owns a 47-game winning streak.

Next, the Titans dropped a 23-14 decision to Class 2A power Glasgow, which is now 3-1. Last week, Mercer fell, 28-13, to Class 6A Central Hardin, which, like Bowling Green, is 4-0 this year.

Combined, the three teams that have taken Mercer down are 11-1. South Oldham and Boyle County, the teams to conquer Anderson early, are 7-0 together.

Coincidence or not, Mercer is the only team to knock off Boyle in the last two years. The Titans ousted Boyle in the second round of the state Class 4A playoffs last year, 31-30. Boyle had beaten Mercer, 14-0, in the regular season.

"Dustin Baker is a quarterback who can beat you running or throwing," Peach said of the Titan signal-caller. They have a great wide receiver in Lane Peavler, and they have a stable of outstanding running backs in Kobe Ford, Braxton Bradshaw and Dee Smith.

"On defense, they are led by (linebacker) Joey DeGiovanni who seems to be in on every tackle."

According to statistics submitted to the Kentucky High School Athletic Association, DeGiovanni had been in on 38 tackles through Mercer's first three games.

Senior wide receiver-defensive back Austin Sparrow, whose father, Casey, was the Anderson girls' basketball coach for three seasons in the late 1990s, is solid.

But while Peach says Mercer is formidable, he also believes it will be a test for his team's ability to recover from successive losses, something that has not hit Anderson football since 2008.

"In the past, we have had games where we got blown out," Peach said

Cross country runners rewrite personal records

From staff reports

Several Anderson County High School cross country runners set personal records in a large field at the Bluegrass Invitational at Lexington's Masterson Station Park on Saturday.

Blake Borwig's 19:26 time over the 5k course was his best ever even though he had just returned to action after being off for a week with an illness, according to Anderson boys' coach Scott Buser. Borwig led all Anderson finishers.

Abram Gettlefinger was eight seconds behind Borwig but set a personal record as well, according to Buser.

Buser said Clay Bowman improved his time by 1:20 from the week before at Shelby County while Hayden Lyons shaved 2:30 off his time.

The Anderson girls were unable to field a full team due to ACT testing and other sports commitments, but Miranda Rzendzian, Avery Reynolds, Jacy Isaacs and Allison Guzicki all pared more than two minutes off their times from the Shelby meet.

Newton receives medal in middle school division

Anderson County's Jalen Newton placed 12th out of 189 runners in the boys' middle school division with a 16:15 time over a 4k course. Newton medaled and set a personal record while Jordan McHugh competed in his first 4k.

On the girls' side, Madison Cox and Abby Satterly both set personal records with 20:16 and 20:51 respectively.

GIRLS' SOCCER

Lady Bearcats explode past Collins, clinch district's top seed

Second half eruption buries Collins

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County clinched the top seed in the 30th District Tournament Monday night, defeating visiting Collins, 5-2, in girls' high school soccer action.

Trailing 2-1 late in the first half, Anderson rallied for a tie at the break, then totally dominated the second 40 minutes to win going away.

Anderson improved to 6-6-1 on the season, but most importantly, the Lady Bearcats completed a perfect season in district play. Anderson won the district title in 2012, but was runner-up to Spencer County last year.

The tournament gets underway Monday, Oct. 13, hosted by Shelby County.

"It is a big deal," Anderson coach Jason Earnest said. "It is a big deal for confidence purposes. There is some pride involved but it is mostly about confidence."

Which is what Monday's contest was.

Tied with a team that came in at only 2-7-0, Earnest simply reminded his team not to panic, even though the Lady Bearcats had dominated play everywhere but on the scoreboard in the first half.

"I felt confident," Earnest said. "We have been playing better soccer since we lost to Western Hills.

"I was just really wanting the kids to not panic. I told the girls to work the ball to our feet. As long as we have the ball on our feet and continue to pass, we would be fine."

Anderson County's Anna Cornish goes on the attack against Collins Monday night. Cornish scored Anderson's first goal.

With the teams fighting a steady rain for the first 15 minutes of the second half, Anderson was able to take control on the scoreboard.

Anderson took the lead 12 minutes into the second half when freshman Evan Kays ran under a long ball, then went one-on-one with the Collins keeper before deftly sending a shot to the net.

Ten minutes later, Kays struck again, this time getting free from the Collins defense on the left side and sending a missile to the net, effectively sealing the deal, 4-2.

Tate Thompson added an insurance goal in the 72nd minute, practically mirroring Kays' second goal from the right.

Collins never seriously threatened after taking a 2-1 lead with 10 minutes left in the first half.

"It had been frustrating when we got behind because we had controlled possession," Earnest said, "but I told them to keep passing."

Passing is what got Anderson on the board in the 13th minute.

Anna Cornish got Anderson started, taking a pass from Allie Johnson to score. Collins answered with a pair of goals off Anderson mistakes, including a free kick that appeared to bound away from diving Anderson goalie Billie Clark. The free kick put Collins up 2-1.

"We gave up some goals we shouldn't have," Earnest said. "When you are playing better soccer, you have to eliminate the small mistakes that they can take advantage of. They did a good job taking advantage."

Anderson tied things when Claire Prater connected from 20 yards in the 36th minute.

"We fought really hard to tie things," Earnest said. "I felt confident."

Evan Kays, center, races Collins' Lindsey Creque for possession during Monday's game. Kays scored two goals as the Lady Bearcats clinched the top seed in the 30th District Tournament. Looking on is Anderson County's Izzy Ransdell.

Lady Bearcats take fourth in Boyle Tournament

Anderson finished fourth in the Little Caesar's Classic at Boyle County last week.

The Lady Bearcats routed Southwestern, 5-1, in the opener. Taylor Harley, who had not scored all season, broke through with four goals.

"It was a mismatch," Earnest said. "We had a lot more speed."

In the semifinals, the Lady Bearcats pushed 16th-ranked Lexington Dunbar to the limit before losing in a shootout.

"We played as good as we have played all year," Earnest said. "We were really defensive and we had possession a lot. We had chances to win that game."

The contest ended in a scoreless tie with Dunbar winning the shootout, 3-0.

Saturday, No. 8 Scott County routed the Lady Bearcats 6-0, scoring a pair of early goals and then getting an avalanche.

Big week ahead

Anderson travels to South Oldham, ranked ninth in the state, Wednesday night.

Anderson then hosts Simon Kenton Saturday afternoon before traveling to old rival Woodford County Monday. Next Wednesday, the Lady Bearcats host No. 17 Oldham County.

"We have the three top teams in the region in South Oldham, Simon Kenton and Oldham County and we have a rivalry game with Woodford County in there," Earnest said. "We had hoped to have a little better record at this time, but we will see how we are against the best teams in the region."

Anderson golfers second at Danville

The Anderson County boys' high school golf team showed the promise of a team with the talent to make a return trip to the state tournament last week. Unfortunately for the Bearcats, they also showed the inconsistency that comes from having a young team.

The Bearcats capped the week with a strong second place finish in the Danville Invitational at Danville Country Club but were blown out by Franklin County in a dual match that decided the Central Kentucky Bluegrass Conference tournament regular season championship three days before. The Bearcats also defeated Western Hills, even though Anderson coach Jim Beward felt his team could have played much better in that match.

Saturday, the Bearcats attacked the Danville Country Club with focus as they finished second in the tournament. Sophomore Brayden Nicholson's seven-over 79 was a strong point for the Bearcats, who finished eight strokes behind Franklin County.

"The 313 would have been under 310 had Tyler Brothers not been affected by a stolen ball in the middle of the fifth fairway," Beward said. "After being four over for the first 13 holes, he cracked a drive on his 14th hole only to have it inadvertently picked up by one of the players in the group directly in front of him. While the mistake was discovered a couple of holes later, it had already cost Tyler a lost ball penalty and the resultant frustration hurt him for the rest of the round. He took a triple bogey on that hole and played the last five holes in seven-over par, thuring what would have been a 76 or 77 into an 83."

Zachary Toles led the Bearcats with a 74, which tied for third individually, while Jordan Morgan came in tied for fourth with a 75.

Wednesday, the Bearcats might have hit the nadir of the season, losing 151-181 to Franklin County at Frankfort Country Club.

"We deserved to get pounded," Beward said. "I felt like we played scared from the beginning and settled for the fact that they were going to beat us.

"I expected us to play better – the kids seemed loose and ready to go when we got on the bus to go to Frankfort – but something happened as soon as we got to the country club.

Brothers led Anderson with a six-over 42.

Monday, Anderson defeated Western Hills 161-177 at Wild Turkey Trace. Toles won medalist honors with a 37, his first medalist honor in a conference match all season.

"The greens were really slick from the Governor's Open, held (Sept. 6 and 7) and both teams struggled with the fast greens," Beward said.

Lady Bearcats experience 'learning moments' at Boyle

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

The Anderson County girls' high school golf team had a tough day at the Boyle County Invitational, held Saturday at Old Bridge Golf Course in Danville.

The Lady Bearcats finished with a 437 on the par 288 (4 x 72) course. Cheyenne Searcy led the Lady Bearcats with a 103, followed by Christina Montgomery's 105.

Anderson coach Robert Hanks said the team's subpar performance was due to not being prepared for the tough playing conditions. "It was a very cool, wet morning. We did not handle those conditions very well and I take full responsibility for that," Hanks said.

Hanks said his team experienced some "learning moments" at the tournament.

Last Wednesday, the Lady Bearcats defeated Franklin County but lost to Western Hills in a tri-match held at Juniper Hills Golf Course in Frankfort.

"The wind and the fast greens made for a tough day," Hanks said.

Anderson shot a nine-hole total of 213, three ahead of Franklin but 13 back of Western Hills. Montgomery's 48 led Anderson in the tri-match.

BOYLE

"I am going to go look at the tape to see why couldn't make it interesting in the second half."

Some would argue that the Bearcats did make it interesting, trailing 34-26 after Chris Toomey hauled in a 14-yard scoring pass from Zachary Carmichael with 6:01 to play.

Boyle, however, showed why it is among Kentucky's elite programs and has designs on an eighth state title in 2014.

The Rebels moved 74 yards in five plays with Eric Brown racing the final 55 yards to seal the Rebels' fourth win in as many starts.

After Anderson's fourth turnover, the Rebels' Aidan Stewart-Hoskins motored 38 yards for the final tally with 2:40 to play.

Boyle finished with 527 offensive yards to Anderson's 395, meaning that 112 of the 132-yard difference came late. Peach, however, was not happy, nor was he taking any consolation that for 42 minutes, it was a battle of two of central Kentucky's best teams.

"The game is still going," he said. "It doesn't matter if it is the first minute of the game or the last minute of the game. We need to keep playing."

In Friday's early going, it appeared that Anderson was more than ready to get the state's attention. The Bearcats forced three turnovers in Boyle's first four possessions.

"It was really a turnover game," said Smith. "It was kind of unusual because both teams don't normally do that. One of the reasons why it happened was you had two good football teams and there was a lot of hitting going on. It was a very physical game and when that happens, the ball is going to pop out occasionallly."

Caleb Dowell (63), nicknamed 'The General' by his teammates, salutes the Anderson County student section after recovering a Boyle County fumble on the third play of the game Friday night. Anderson turned the fumble into a touchdown to take a quick 7-0 lead.

It popped out on Boyle's third play, when Anderson's Caleb Dowell pounced on a loose ball. Two plays later, Carmichael found a wide open Toomey across the middle for a 51-yard scoring strike.

"We knew Anderson County was a very good football team," Smith said. "Their skills people are really good. I knew they would challenge us like they did."

But the Bearcats were unable to put any distance between themselves and the Rebels, squandering two more first quarter opportunities after Boyle fumbles. The Rebels blocked a punt, setting up Hoskins' first touchdown, a 4-yard run to finish a 31-yard drive. Then after quarterback Josiah Robbins fumbled for the second time, he made amends from his defensive back spot with a spectacular interception of Chris Toomey's option pass that was intended for Brayden Russell.

Robbins was a nemesis all night, running for 124 yards on 13 carries and completing 13-of-25 passes for 186 yards and a touchdown. Seven of those passes went for first downs while six of his runs moved the chains.

While Anderson did eventually take a 14-7 lead on Carmichael's 28-yard scoring pass to Ryan Martin, the tone had been set.

Boyle answered on successive possessions to take a 21-14 lead, then stopped the Bearcats deep in Rebel territory when Hagen Ellis picked off a Carmichael pass 14 seconds before intermission.

While a Carmichael-to-Russell pass pulled Anderson within 21-20 – Landon Curry's extra point attempt failed – with 4:30 left in the third quarter, the Bearcats could only think about the "what if?"

"Our defense came up with a couple of big plays," Smith said. "Basically that is what it took to win the football game."

While Boyle remained unbeaten, Anderson fell below .500, excluding season openers, for the first time since Peach's inaugural season in 2005. Part of that, Peach notes, is the caliber of competition, but Peach also says the Bearcats have much work ahead.

"I told the guys it is easy to have class and character when you win," he said. "You really get to find out what you are mad of when we have these experiences happen to us."

after Boyle County put a 22-point loss on his team. "We got massacred by J-town (in 2010). We were blown out by Bryan Station and Franklin County (in 2011.) Those teams bounced back to have great years. "

It will have to come back against a Mercer team thirsty for a win over Anderson. The series has been interrupted several times over the years, but since it was resumed in 2009, Anderson has won each time.

Last season, Anderson blew a close game open, scoring four unanswered touchdowns after Mercer had pulled within 28-21 in the third quarter. The Bearcats rolled to a 55-21 win at Warford Stadium.

While the Bearcats are seventh in Class 5A and Mercer is seventh in Class 4A in the Rating the State rankings that appeared in Monday's Lexington Herald-Leader, the Bearcats are considered a about a touchdown favorite.

A lopsided win by either team like the last two years – Anderson won 48-7 in 2012 – would be a huge surprise.

"We are going to have to go back to work and have a great mental attitude," Peach said. "We are going to have to correct the mistakes we made (against Boyle County) and do better next week."

CARLTON

Gritton not starting me against KSD in the seventh grade when he thought I should be playing harder.

"(Anderson) Coach (Glen) Drury, all 5-foot-9 of him, started yelling at me at half-court and backed me up to the wall one day when I got too big for my britches. I never questioned him again.

"Happy (Osborne, Carlton's Georgetown coach) revived my career after I left Utah and rekindled my love for basketball.

"(Anderson assistant coach) Jimmy Young taught me how to box out and he is still the only coach or player that was able to keep me from getting around them."

Carlton also noted his many teammates. "There are too many to mention, except one. Tick. Brent Gritton," he said of his high school teammate. "He is my favorite teammate of all time. We played on the same team from the fifth grade to our senior year in high school....He was the starting point guard on a team that was four-and-a-half minutes from winning the region. When I speak at camps, I use Tick as an example of what hard work can do for you."

Carlton, who is now an assistant principal at Mercer County Intermediate School, says he hopes his award will raise his credibility when some other coach who got cut from his middle school team tells them something, they are all over it," Carlton laughed.

The Hall of Fame is one of the highest honors a player can achieve, but Carlton says when he is inducted on March 17, one person will be missing.

"I do with my grandmother (Naomi Brown) was still here so I could share this with her," he says. "Moreso than anybody else, she shaped me into the person I am today. Anything I have ever done athletically pales in comparison for what she did for others throughout her life. She was one of a kind."

New teal-only season gives waterfowlers additional opportunity

Good concentrations possible at Taylorsville Lake

By Lee McClellan
Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

Kentucky waterfowl hunters now have additional days in September to pursue teal.

A teal-only season that is new for 2014 runs from Sept. 22-25. A combined wood duck and teal season opens Sept. 17 and closes Sept. 21.

Hunters may harvest up to six teal a day during the experimental teal-only season.

"Over the last several years, Kentucky, Tennessee and Florida have been working to obtain additional teal-only days at the end of their early wood duck seasons," said Rocky Pritchert, migratory bird coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "In late June, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service approved the request and allowed four additional days to be added to the end of the current wood duck and teal seasons."

The permission from U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service came after the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission set the dates for the 2014 September wood duck and teal seasons. This prevented the publication of the additional teal-only hunting days in the 2014-2015 Kentucky Hunting Guide for Dove, Wood Duck, Teal, Woodcock, Snipe and Crow.

Blue-winged teal are the second most abundant duck species in North America behind mallard ducks. They are approximately one-third of the size of a mallard. Hunters will likely encounter blue-winged teal in Kentucky, but they may also see green-winged teal. Cinnamon teal are native to the western United States and rare in Kentucky. Northern shovelers look similar to blue-winged teal, but have a much larger body and bill.

The largest concentrations of blue-winged teal migrate through the western part of the state. "Blue-winged teal prefer large shallow open waters and marshes, making them fairly accessible to Kentucky hunters," Pritchert said. "Blue-wings are generally not as skittish as other duck species and don't require much in the way of special equipment."

Pritchert said a few decoys, waders and a little camouflage clothing will suffice for teal hunting. "Hunters can take advantage of natural cover around the water's edge," he said. "Hunters don't need a blind if they stay low."

Those without private land to hunt can find good teal hunting on the sloughs and lakes of Sloughs Wildlife Management Area in Henderson and Union counties as well as on Ballard and Boatwright WMAs in Ballard County. The many ponds and lakes of Peabody WMA in Hopkins, Muhlenberg and Ohio counties also offer productive teal hunting.

"These wildlife management areas can offer some pretty exceptional teal hunting when birds are moving through," Pritchert said.

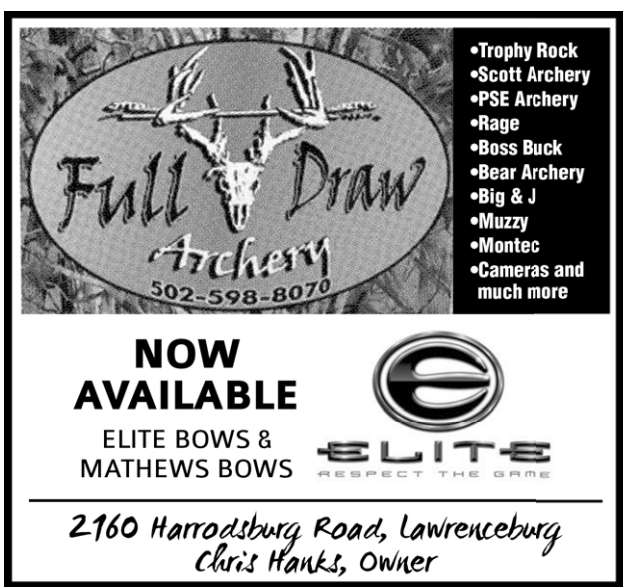

Larger waters also offer good opportunities, such as the many shallow flats of Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley. "Some central Kentucky reservoirs also attract teal," Pritchert said. "When the birds are migrating, good concentrations have been seen on Green River, Cedar Creek Lake and Taylorsville Lake."

Teal fly fast and close to the water; a test of any wing shooter's skills. "They are challenging to hit because of their small size and erratic flying with lots of twists and turns," Pritchert said.

Pritchert reminds hunters these additional hunting days are just for teal. "Make sure of your target before you shoot," he said.

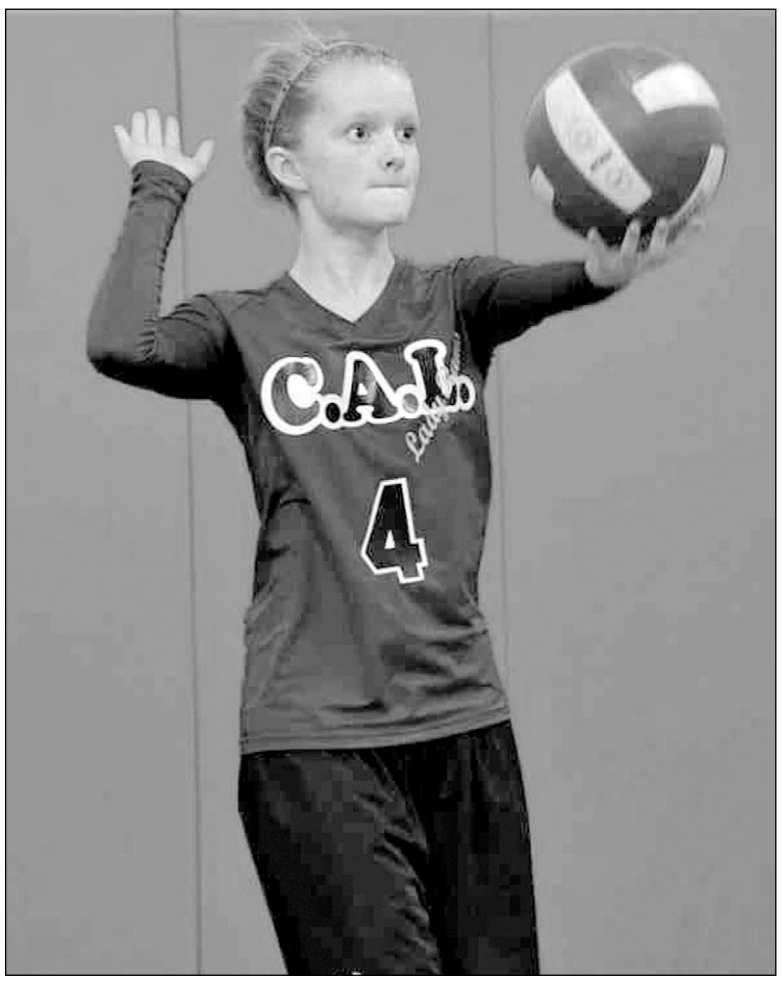

A valid Kentucky hunting license, a Kentucky migratory game bird – waterfowl permit along with a federal migratory bird hunting permit are required to hunt teal. Hunters may only use non-toxic shot while hunting any waterfowl species.

Anderson recovers to whip Shelby, takes lead in district race

Third Volley Smash Tournament set for this week

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County took a major step toward the top seed in the 30th District Volleyball Tournament last week when the Lady Bearcats defeated Shelby County 3-1 last Monday in Shelbyville.

The Lady Bearcats overcame a sluggish first set to win 19-25, 25-19, 25-17 and 25-8.

Anderson coach Bob Hardin said the Lady Bearcats opened things up in the second set with kills from Rachel Swartz and Baylee McKenzie fueling the run.

"We continued to play well after that," Hardin said. "Katie Crabtree began to get her timing down on the Shelby County hitters, having five blocks. Katy Carmichael had some really good kills and momentum was on our side after that, taking the third game, 25-17."

Anderson routed Shelby, 25-8 in the decisive fourth set.

Swartz, McKenzie and Carmichael each had 10 kills while Crabtree, Amanda Buffin and Emily Couch had five apiece.

Ally Hayes and Ragan Darst sparked a strong defense wth Hayes providing 15 digs. Katie Briscoe was credited with 15 assists.

Anderson stands at 3-0 in the district but must play the three district foes one more time during the season.

Wednesday, the Lady Bearcats rolled to a strong win over Western Hills in three sets as Hayes was credited with 17 digs.

"We had several hit attempts and props to the Western Hills girls. They kept battling and digging some very hard hits that we had. ... It seemed like eery time we hit the ball, someone was right there to try and dig it up so props to their team."

Anderson rolled to a 25-15, 25-18 and 25-16 win, pulling away at the end of each set.

McKenzie scored 10 kills and 10 digs while Swartz recorded eight kills. Carmichael scored five kills with Couth, Crabtree and Buffin each getting four.

Taylor Phillips delivered 14 assists with Briscoe adding 11.

Anderson, 8-4 after last week, was to have played a very good Washington County team Monday in Springfield. Thursday, the Lady Bearcats return home against Thomas Nelson.

Anderson to host third Smash Tournament

Anderson County will host the third annual Smash Volleyball Tournament Friday, Sept. 19 and Saturday, Sept. 20. The tournament is set to begin at 6 p.m. Friday and at 9 a.m. on Saturday.

Matches will be going in in both of the school's gyms until the finals, scheduled for mid-afternoon Saturday.

Teams entered in the tournament are Taylor County, Bardstown, LaRue County, Franklin County, Spencer County and Anderson County.

Why Does Popcorn Pop?

American Indian tribes once thought spirits living inside popcorn kernels made them pop. When the kernels were cooked, the spirits would get angry, shake and then burst and disappear into a puff of steam.

Today, scientists know it is the water inside kernels, not spirits, that makes them pop. When the kernels are heated, the water turns into steam and builds pressure against the surface. Eventually, the surface gives way and the kernels pop, turning inside out and releasing steam.

Popcorn may be noisy, but once cooked, it makes for a delicious, healthy snack. Go ahead and have a bowl.

84 PERCENT

That's how many Kentucky adults read a daily, Sunday or weekly newspaper in an average week.

That's more than 5 out of 6 people.

And truth be told, we like to think that 6th person may be listening while one of the other five reads out loud.

It's all right here. In the newspaper.

This fact brought to you by the Kentucky Press Association and its 162 member newspapers.
